Joan has always been fascinated by the spontaneous natural flow of pigment and water. Influenced by nature's forms and organic shapes she now combines watercolor and acrylic medium.

Mind Play, 2013, Acrylic on Paper, 22 x 30

Joan's new directions to nonobjective painting is her
culmination of her vast experience as a painter.
She finds herself drawn to nature's simplest forms, at times combining calligraphic marks and color to unite the composition with her intuitive gestures.
Using her expressionist responses at times to musical pieces she interprets the suggestions of steady
calm, graceful movements as felt in musical rhythms.
Her intuition and love of painting are sparked by her new direction.
The natural elements are portrayed with spirit.
